

The Bangle Sellers

Q1. Who is the speaker in the poem?

Ans. The Bangle Sellers are the speakers in the poem.

Q2. How are the bangles described in the first stanza of the poem and who are these for?

Ans. In the first stanza, the bangles are described as delicate and bright. The bangles have been labelled as symbols of happy lives. They have been referred to a rainbow in the sky, as the rainbow is made of seven colours which are associated with the different emotions and feelings of the daughters and wives.

Q3. The poet uses different similes for the bangles. What are these?

Ans. The bangles have been compared with many things in the poem. The poet has employed different similes to express the importance of the bangles in the lives of women. The similes used in the poem are:

Silver and blue as the mountain mist

Flushed like the buds that dream

Like the flame of her marriage fire

Like her bridal laughter and bridal tears

Q4. Name the different colours of bangles mentioned in the poem? What do these colours represent?

Ans. The different colours of bangles mentioned in the poem and their respective purposes are as follows:

First the rainbow coloured bangles are meant for happy wives and happy daughters.

Colours such as silver and blue that symbolise freshness and purity are made for a maiden's wrist.

The warm colours like red, orange and yellow are made for the bride.

The gold flecked grey and purple is meant for the middle aged women who with pride have nourished the fair sons in their arms and who served the household with honour and worship their Gods alongside their husbands.

Q5. The word *some' has been repeated in the poem for a purpose. What is it?

Ans. The word 'some' has been repeated to express the variety of bangles that the bangle sellers carry with them. The variety of the bangles correspond with the different stages of the life of a woman. It also expresses the feelings and emotions of a woman with different colours.

Q6. Explain the following lines:

Some are meet for a maiden's wrist,

Silver and blue as the mountain mist

Ans. These lines have been taken from the poem "The Bangle Sellers" written by Sarojini Naidu. These lines describe the bangles suitable for a maiden. These women choose the colours resembling the colours of sky and clouds. These colours stand for calmness, innocence and purity.
