

Colours of Rainbow

Ans1: It was a beautiful day. When the narrator looked out, he observed drops of water falling from the awnings of the windows. He saw the chilli plants dancing in the breeze and water drops falling from them. He observed the pleasant beauty of nature after rainfall.

Ans2: The narrator who was enthralled by the mesmerising beauty of nature after morning rain could not pay attention to what his daughter was saying because he was engrossed in his musings of his beautiful childhood days.

Ans3: The tiff between the narrator and his wife on this particular day was because of misunderstandings. The wife called the narrator for tea but the narrator who was engrossed in his musings did not hear her. So she thought that he was not paying any heed towards her. The other reasons for their daily arguments were mainly the increasing expenses, growing kids and feeding them on the same limited salary. Poverty created tension between the two and resulted in slight quarrels.

Ans4: The narrator returned home late that night. He saw that the kids had gone to bed and his wife was waiting for him for dinner. He also noticed that his wife had gone wan and pale, probably from not eating anything for the whole day.

Ans5: The narrator did not have an appetite because he had already had his fill outside.
